

2024 NTSO Art Contest Permission Slip

The New Texas Symphony Orchestra (NTSO) is sponsoring an art contest for high school students. The contest involves the student listening to selected pieces of orchestral music and creating a poster inspired by that music. The student can use their imagination to interpret what they hear from the music. The posters will be judged by a panel of art and music teachers, and cash prizes will be given to the top three entries.

The artwork will be displayed at a concert of the New Texas Symphony Orchestra where the selected music pieces will be performed. All students, with their family and friends, are invited to attend this free concert on Sunday, May 19, 3:00 PM at Moody Performance Hall in the downtown Dallas Arts District.

Permission is required from the parent/guardian for the student artist to enter the contest and for their poster to be publicly displayed labeled with the student's name, grade level and school.
